3 Coherency – paragraph structure

Coherency within paragraph

- spatial or temporal
- general → specific
- specific → general
- least important → most important
- familiar → unfamiliar
- simple → complex
- certain → uncertain

Examples

- spatial

large-scale → «Globally, wetland soils are at risk of conversion and mid-scale → destruction [...]. This is particularly relevant in East Africa small-scale → [...]. Even protected wetlands in Kenya have [...]»

- certain → uncertain

certain → «Stratified lakes accumulate methane in their bottom possible → waters. During lake overturn, stored methane may reach unknown → the surface layer [...]. [T]he fate of methane during the overturn period is still a matter of controversy.»

3 Coherency - relational devices

Relational devices

- parallelism

- repetition
 - Use for clarity
 - Use in moderation!

- transitional expressions
 - Use for variety

Examples

« First, ... Second, ... Third, ...»

To quantify cell numbers, we applied CARD-FISH. Samples were fixed onto filters. Filters were embedded in agarose, cells were permeabilized for 70 min at 37 °C and peroxidases inactivated for 10 min. Filters were incubated for 2.5 h at 46 °C. After washing, filters were placed into the buffer for 30 min at 37 °C. DAPI was used for counterstaining cells and the filters were mounted on slides...»

«however», «nevertheless», «on the other hand», «in contrast»

«therefore», «consequently», «as a result»

4 Phrasing - useful phrases

4 Phrasing - paraphrasing

Elements of paraphrasing

- use different vocabulary
- use different structure
- retain meaning
- retain key words and phrases

! Do not plagiarise !

Check out this guide to prevent academic plagiarism.

Use online thesauri for synonyms!

Techniques for paraphrasing

«Mangrove forests are frequently inundated by brackish water»

- change vocabulary

«Mangrove forest biomes are often flooded by estuarial water.»

- change word order, exchange active ↔ passive

«Brackish water inundates mangrove forests frequently.»

- change word class

«Mangrove forests are subject to frequent inundation by brackish water.»

- combine techniques

«Brackish water flooding of mangals is frequent.»

5 Brevity

DOs

- keep it short and simple
- be stingy with words
- have one idea per sentence
- use the active form
- use positive phrases
- use concrete terms

«we used the method» not «the method was used»

«the results are different» not «the results are not the same»

«it will be published in Nature» not «it will be published in a reputable journal»

DON'Ts

- write in «sophisticated style»
- Use too many adjectives & adverbs
- use unnecessary constructions
- nominalise
- use empty modifiers
- use tautologous modifiers

e.g. «It is clear that», «the fact is that», «in an attempt to», «in order to» e.g. «basically», «indeed», «quite», «actually»

e.g. «completely finish», «may potentially», «ultimate result», «blue in colour»
